PREFACE

Household Resource Management is an important area of learning that helps individuals and families properly manage their available resources. This module is designed to provide learners with knowledge and skills in managing time, money, energy, materials, and other resources needed in everyday household life.

The module discusses the importance of planning, decision-making, budgeting, wise use of resources, and proper management of household activities. It also emphasizes the value of responsibility, cooperation, wise consumption, and sustainability in managing household resources.

Through the lessons and activities in this module, learners are encouraged to apply what they have learned in their daily lives and future households. It is hoped that this module will help learners develop practical skills and responsible attitudes necessary for efficient, organized, and sustainable household resource management.
